EXPERTISE

Adam is responsible for the day to day management of forensic accounting cases at Rushtons Forensics, undertaking the required analysis and preparing reports under the direction of Rushtons' two experienced and accredited experts in Neil Calvert and Michael Muschamp.

At Rushtons Forensics, Adam has experience in producing company and share valuation reports, predominately in matrimonial disputes. He has also worked on loss of profit calculations, personal injury claims and various fraud investigations.

Prior to joining Rushtons, Adam worked for nearly 5 years at PwC, where he qualified as a Chartered Accountant and began to specialise in forensic accounting. This provided experience across a wide range of forensic accounting services including large scale fraud investigations, loss of profit valuations, shareholder disputes, completion account review and negotiation processes, and anti-bribery and corruption reviews.

During his time at PwC he also worked in the Sales and Purchase Agreement (SPA) team in Transaction Services, providing support at all stages of a transaction from pre-deal work through to post-completion.

Rushtons Forensics is the Lancashire representative of NIFA (Network of Independent Forensic Accountants), whose membership consists of independent accountancy practices throughout the UK who specialise in forensic accountancy, and are able to provide a cost effective alternative to the national firms of accountants.

TRAINING

Adam undertakes various training courses to ensure that he is fully aware of the requirements of a forensic accountant and continues to develop his knowledge in order to become an accredited expert in the near future.

NIFA provides forensic accountancy training seminars on topics such as changes to legal reporting standards, valuation methods and the latest issues in the industry.

Adam also undertakes training to keep up to date of current developments in audit, accountancy and taxation work to ensure a breadth of skills as well as the specialist field of forensic accounting.
